This guide uses independently sourced photographs to explore how an exhibition publication can move between context and detail.

VISITOR NOTES

Three ways to look

Choose one question for each object.

01 / Material

What is it made from, and what can you see of the process?

02 / Use

How might the object have been handled or operated?

03 / Context

What information would help you understand its place in a wider story?

Give the label room.

A label should name the object, give essential context and make the source of the information clear. Separate a visitor prompt from a factual claim. In a live guide, confirm object titles, dates and rights with the institution.

A note to take away

Which detail changed how you saw the object?

A guide can start a question.

A guide to finding your way, looking closely and making time for the collection.
